BELASCO PLAY

Its Automatic Heart Thumps Along from Tableau to Tableau. but It Doesn't Pump Blood.

SPECTACLE OVERSHADOWS MRS CARTER'S ACTING.

"Adrea" Chiefly Notable for Its Barbaric Splendor, Which Is On with a Lavish Hand.

There's more scenery than soul in 'Adrea," the new Belasco production was revealed in the House of David last night. It's a great big magent thing without a heart. At least heart is automatic and goes thump-along from tableau to tableau inad of steadily pumping blood into the stead of steadily pumping body of the drame. This is its one

There is considerable beauty in the ink verse of John Luther Long, but this, and the whole story in fact, is helmed by the royal extravagance Mr. Belasco's dressing. The senses stunned at the outset by the splenof the setting, and through it all you are gazing more at the spectacle than feeling the grip of the so-called

The production is one of which only Belasco is capable. His hand has lost none of its cunning, and it is more prodigal than ever. The barbaric beauty of the scenes, which are those of a ean, "about 500 A. D.," causes you to sit like an awestruck child in ad-miring wonderment. The question is whether Belasco's well-realized ambition to be "the wizard of the stage" not o'erleaped itself.

More than once last night Mrs. Carter was outshone by the brilliancy of surroundings. She moved amid a coloring against which at only her Titian tresses were the blind Adrea stumbled down the palace steps, sick with the misery of ways more or less a victim of regal direumstances. In that rather indelicate scene, and that alone, she drew from the audience a gasp of sympathy. Most of the time she was merely ier emotional moments, but the play es a whole did not give her those op-portunities which show her at her best. "Adrea" is unreal—and, as one lobby onist expressed it, 'headachy' without that atmosphere of mysticism which made "The Darling of the Gode"

the day that it is scarcely possible to share the compassion which leads Adrea TWO MUSICALES INVITE from a worse death at the hands of the enraged Senators. Then, too, arles A. Stevenson played Kasso sc lly and looked so unloverlike that it was a relief to have him out of the

"Mrs. Leffingwell's Boots," at the Savoy, Abounds in Wit and Funny Situations-is a Big Hit.

Augustus Thomas found "The Other Girl's" stage sister in "Mrs. Leffing-well's Boots" at the Savoy last night. The whole point really to the comedy was, as the author expressed it, in the "added attraction" of the opening night speech. "If the woman is innocent, why should she lie about it?" The comedy is set up in Larchmont, near after nightfall and just before day-who has a husband with red whiskers at the chin and just red brush from the chin to the ears. He works in town and has suspicions because Mellen's New Haven road brings him home at irregular intervals. He is the type of man who kicks the family dog when it growls a warning as the burglar raises the window eash, and kicks the dog in the morning because the burglar has stolen the family jewels. A woman with a husband like that has got to lie -that is, tell innocent, silly lies that lead to awkward situations.

While at Bar Harbor a pair of her boots are found outside the window of a pleasing young man without red whiskers. A private detective supplies the low lights and the mystery. This particular detective is a wicked young scamp with a cracked head-cracked with a wallop in a college scrap. The cracked young man is the brother of the girl who is in love with the other young man against whom suspicion was firected because of the misplaced boots. And so it goes. A doctor, who also had a cracked head and had the crease rubbed out in a osteopathic hospital at Missouth siding-think of osteopathy in Missouri, where the word would be interpreted as meaning anything from new Republican dope to a spavin cure. operates and removes all doubts.

The ductor jiu jutsus the wrinkle ou proof; and save for the moment when of the young man's mental works and everything is explained. Of course, there are incidental Larchmont sidehaving been tricked into the arms of lights—the "no cab at the station on the hideous court jester, she was ad-York" over Mellen's road because the storm has added another coat of rust is hired to show off for the $2,500 year Larchmont milionaire; a mail Board of Education Fixes Series part of a dazzling exhibit. it was a relief to have him out of the way.

The story would be more effective and more natural if it were made to turn on the hatred of the sisters after the description. The epilogue in which addres saorifices her sight to the sun and her throne to her sister's son, is an unnecessary and unconvincing species of exalitation.

The law of Menethus that "no sovering shall sit my throne or wear my arown who is not in his mind and hody sound," was written in Latin letters of gold on the first curtain, and many in the audience were content to let it go at that, instead of waiting till after midnight too see Adrea carry it out to the letter for the benefit of her orphan nephew.

Little Louis Grimm played the youngster with a Belasco-born precodous Bass. Tyrone Power, as Arkissus, the devoted ally of Adrea, was excellent, as were Miss Edith Crane as Julia, J. Harry Benrimo as the Fool, and Francis Fowers as Thrysos, who came with wild horses to drag Kaeso to death with him the fact that he well deserved. C. D.

Nordica the Isolde in a Fine Performance of Wagner's Great Love Story at the Metropolitan Opera-House.

Just a touch of that intangible, indefinable, pervasive spiritual essence-call it magnetism, if you will-would have made the performance of "Tristan und Isolde" at the Metropolitan Opera-House last night a most notable one Lacking that, it still was of a high order of merit. Rarely, indeed, has Wagner's overwhelming love story, with where Mr. Thomas sleeps, and the ac- its sensuous pulsations, its poignant tion appropriately occurs between just sriefs and its pitifully tragic ending, between just become disclosed with more beauty or with greater skill. There was something of stiffness and coldness at the beginning, but with the unfolding of the second act came warmth and pliancy, and the final curtain was dropped, just before midnight, upon an intense time here as Tristan, established a new tradition. Something of virility seemed lacking in him while on the ship; but as the lover he sang with ravishing freshness, beauty and wealth of tone, rising in the last act to great histrionic eights. Memories of Van Dyck's impersonation will not down; but this man sang as well as acted.

Nordica, the Isolde, whose impersons tion of the character is familiar, seemed to be not in the best of voice, with more than a suggestion of shortness of breath. She sang the liebestod with less than her usual prodigality, and once broke badly. Or was it a moment of forgetfulness? But in the great love duet she gave of the plentitude of her powers and was more than satisfying.

Much might be said of Edyth Walker's beautiful singing of Brangaene, her warning notes from the lookout so delightful as to distract attention from the lovers: of Van Rooy's Kurwenal too, one of his best characters, but that it is familiar. Blass was King Mark; Muhlmann, Melot: Reiss, the Shepherd, and Bars the Seaman. Fiery liniments, drawing plasters and penetrating oils never cured a case of Rheumatism; because it is got a local or skin disease, but a disease of the blood caused by a sour, acid condition of that vital fluid. The kidneys and bowels get weak, the liver torpid, and the poisonous accumulations that should pass off through the usual channels of nature are absorbed by the blood and distributed into the muscles, joints and nerves through the circulation, producing inflammation and swelling of these parts, excitement of the nerves and other painful and disagreeable symptoms of the disease. Rheumatism sufferers look with dread upon the winter season with its damp, cold, changing weather, for the first slight exposure is liable to bring on an attack, and the sharp, cutting pains and feverish, swollen joints and muscles make life miserable with almost unbearable torture. Local applications will often give relief for a little while, but can do no permanent good, because the trouble is not within their reach; and DEPARTMENT OF STREET CLEANING.
